

River Runoff Hits Hard in Provo Canyon

PROVO CANYON — Through the canyon, the Provo River rages wildly, dumping water into canyon parks and encroaching onto Highway 189; Provo City staffers smile but Utah County cringes.

"There's no flooding in Provo City," says Provo official Leland A. Gamette, who adds that every second, 1,525 cubic feet of water drops down a spillway at Deer Creek Dam into the Provo River channel.

But there is flooding in Utah County areas in Provo Canyon, and County Engineer Clyde Naylor says he wants to see the flow reduced 200 cubic feet per second.

After it was flooded, County crews began sandbagging at the one home flooded near Vivian Park. Clean up operations were being delayed because crews were having problems with with a pump, Naylor commented.

The county engineer said it would have been better if someone would have told the county of the higher river flows so sandbagging could have been accomplished before the flood.

Thursday, high water hit Upper Falls Park hardest, less than a mile east of Bridal Veil Falls, escaping the Provo River banks. "The park was pretty much under water," said Naylor.

Canyon Glen Park also experienced some flooding just west of Bridal Veil Falls.

Water also invaded Fraser Park and a nearby trailer park.

Early today, Deer Creek reservoir contained about 143,766 acre feet of water. A acre-foot of water would flood one acre one-foot deep.

But there is still room for 8,234 acre feet in the reservoir that Salt Lake area residents use for drinking and industrial purposes and Utah County and Salt Lake County farmers put to agricultural uses.

Since authorities calculate the reservoir — a popular recreation site — is increasing by about 800 acre-feet each day it is estimated that if out flows and inflows remain the same, the reservoir would be full in about 10 days.

Both city and county officials say they would have liked Provo River Water Users Association to begin releasing water earlier than they did so there would be a larger flood control buffer than the 8,234 acre-foot capacity that exists today.

"We are doing the best we can," said Hugh A. McKellar, who directs the Provo River Water Users Association.

He said his calculations indicate that the outflows are not likely to exceed the present 1,525 cubic-foot-per-second levels.

U.S. Willing to Mediate in Southern Lebanon

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — The United States, architect of the ill-fated May 17 Lebanese-Israeli troop withdrawal accord, agreed to act as mediator to arrange security guarantees in southern Lebanon, the An Nahar newspaper said today.
 The report coincided with talks in the capital today between Lebanese Prime Minister Rashid Karami and the ambassadors of China and France on ways of pressuring Israel to withdraw its troops from southern Lebanon.

 Karami held similar talks with the ambassadors of the Soviet Union, the United States and Britain Thursday.

The independent An Nahar newspaper said U.S. Ambassador Reginald Bartholomew told Karami the United States will dispatch a special envoy to the Middle East to deal with proposed security guarantees in southern Lebanon.

 The guarantees "are to be laid down through indirect talks between Israel and Lebanon under U.S. supervision," the newspaper said in an exclusive report.

Bartholomew first proposed that Lebanon enter direct negotiations with Israel to get the Israeli army to leave Lebanese territory, the newspaper said.

 "Karami rejected the idea, blaming present-day complications in Lebanon on the face-to-face talks between the two countries which produced the now-defunct May 17, 1983 troop withdrawal agreement," the report said.
 "Whereupon, it was decided that the U.S. would contact Israel on the question of security guarantees and in order to have the Israelis discontinue their repressive measures in the south," it said.

Communist Nations Plan Own Olympics Games

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia
 (UPI) — Communist nations decided to hold their own summer games, rivaling the 1984 Olympics in Los Angeles, and cast doubt on communist participation at the 1988 Games in Seoul, South Korea.

The decision to hold separate games came Thursday at a meeting at which Romania, distancing itself from its allies, announced it would send a team to Los Angeles while North Korea indicated it would join the Moscow-led boycott.

Juan Antonio Samaranch, president of the International Olympic Committee, met in Prague with representatives of the 11 communist countries taking part in the daylong meeting but failed to reverse the boycott decision.
 The countries which have said they would join Moscow in snubbing the games in Los Angeles are Afghanistan, Bulgaria, Cuba, Czechoslovakia, East Germany, Hungary, Laos, Mongolia, Poland and Vietnam.

 At the meeting, North Korea expressed support for the boycott but there was no official announcement that it would stay away from the Games in Los Angeles.

 "In terms of the sports world," Ueberroth said of the Soviets' boycott, "it has failed miserably and it is a kick in their backside."
